

Parenting Support Services

Parenting does not come with a handbook. That is why CHR helps families learn skills to create healthy homes.

Being a parent is a life-changing experience that can be both rewarding and challenging. For all that parenting brings, Community Health Resources (CHR) is here to help. CHR's Parenting Support Services is an in-home program that helps parents with children 0-17 years old learn healthy parenting skills. Families are paired with a trained Parent Educator who visits homes on a weekly basis to provide education, counseling and training. We work with families to recognize their personal and parenting strengths in order to learn child rearing skills and understand child development, as well as manage stress and family resources. By learning to cope with difficult situations and provide appropriate guidance to children, parents can create safe, caring environments for their families.

PREPARING FAMILIES FOR REAL LIFE

Our services focus on teaching, coaching and modeling parenting skills, including how to:

- Identify and prioritize family needs
- Understand reasonable expectations for children based on age and developmental level
- Establish structure and daily routines for children
- Engage children in activities that increase bonding and attachment
- Develop coping mechanisms
- Set appropriate boundaries and discipline
- Navigate and utilize community resources

CREATING A FAMILY PLAN

A Parent Educator will reach out to the family within 72 hours of referral and make the first home visit within 10 calendar days. Within a month of the initial visit, a Parent Educator will complete a Strength-Based Family Assessment to gauge the family's needs and strengths. Together CHR staff and the family create a specialized Family Service Plan that includes goals and action steps. Parent Educators work with the family to implement the plan, amending it along the way to meet each family's unique needs.
