AWARENESS
RESOURCE
MANUAL

May 2024

MESSAGE TO THE READER

I know that seeking mental health support for yourself or someone else is really hard. Before you go any further, it's important that I tell you how proud I am of you for being here. Maybe you're looking through these pages out of pure curiosity. Maybe you're hoping to learn more about mental health. Maybe you've been feeling concerned for a while and are finally ready to connect with someone who can provide insight and support. Regardless of what brought you here, you're taking a crucial step towards building a community in which each individual has the knowledge and awareness necessary to help support those dealing with mental health and/or substance use challenges. Thank you.

The purpose of this manual is to provide mental health and substance use information, resources, and support - both for you as an individual and also as a member of the larger community. Please note that this document is not a comprehensive view of all mental health disorders and it only provides a snapshot of available resources. While it's impossible to include everything, I hope this gives you a more thorough understanding of mental health, substance use, and resources that are dedicated to supporting you and your loved ones.

If nothing else, I hope this manual reminds you that no matter what, you're never alone.

THINGS TO REMEMBER WHEN REACHING OUT FOR SUPPORT FOR YOURSELF...

You are not alone

According to the CDC, more than 50% of people in the US will be diagnosed with a mental illness at some point in their life. There are many people who can understand what you're going through, and many others who are able to provide support and resources.

You are not to blame

There can sometimes be a false narrative that it's your fault if you have a mental illness. Blame has no place here. You are no more to blame for having a mental illness than if you were to come down with the flu.

Recovery is not linear

Your journey to becoming well isn't going to be a straight line. There will be progress, setbacks, ups, and downs along the way. That's normal and expected. Try to hold onto hope about the future during the moments when feeling better seems too far away.

You are not your illness

Your struggles do not define you. There is so much more to the person you are.

Lean on loved ones

It can be hard to reach out and ask for help, but allowing others to support you is only going to make your recovery easier.

Have realistic expectations

Remember that getting well is a process. One therapy session or call to a crisis line isn't going to fix everything, but it is a crucial, brave, and necessary first step.

THINGS TO REMEMBER WHEN REACHING OUT FOR SUPPORT FOR SOMEONE ELSE...

Helping others is rewarding but draining on our emotional resources. Don't forget to take care of yourself, too. Set firm boundaries, pursue a hobby, feed yourself well, and make time for rest.

Your wellness matters

Supporting someone who is struggling with a mental health and/or substance use challenge can be tough. Try to remember that your loved one is doing the very best they can right now.

They're doing the best they can

Fault and blame have no place here. Remember that mental health and substance use disorders are real health conditions, and they aren't caused by something you or your loved one did or didn't do.

This is nobody's fault

Whenever possible, let your loved one make choices and decisions about what happens in their life. It's easy to feel out of control when you're struggling with mental health or substance use challenges and having a say in decision making will give a little control back to your loved one.

Let them make choices & decisions

Remind your loved one that the solution right now doesn't need to be the solution forever. Encourage them to give it a try and remind them that they can always change therapists or approaches if it isn't the right fit.

This solution doesn't have to be forever

Research confirms that the support of loved ones is key to recovery and that people who have support tend to have better treatment outcomes. You're doing important work, and your support matters.

Your support matters

UNDERSTANDING MENTAL HEALTH AND SUBSTANCE USE

What is mental health?

Mental health is a state of wellbeing that allows people to cope with the demands and stresses of everyday life, recognize their own strengths and weaknesses, learn well and work well, and contribute positively to their community. Mental health is a crucial part of our overall health and wellbeing that can impact our ability to make decisions, relate to others, and handle stress in a healthy way.

What is mental illness?

Mental illness refers to a group of brain disorders that affects how a person thinks, feels, and behaves. These conditions cause distress, can have a significant and negative impact on day-to-day life, and may also impact someone's ability to relate to others.

What causes mental illness?

There is no one single cause for mental illness, but many things can increase your risk of developing one, such as:

- Experiencing trauma or abuse early in life
- Having a family history of mental illness
- Chemical imbalances in the brain or other biological factors
- Using drugs or alcohol
- Experiencing a chronic medical condition like cancer
- High stress levels
- Experiencing poverty, violence, or inequality

What symptoms do people experience when they have a mental illness?

People with mental illness can have a wide range of symptoms that impact their feelings, thoughts, and behaviors. Symptoms can include, but are not limited to:

- Shifts in mood
- Sadness
- Anxiety
- Irritability
- Low energy
- Delusions (beliefs that are clearly false)
- Hallucinations (seeing or hearing things that are not there)
- Shifts in sleeping habits
- Changes in eating habits
- Withdrawal from loved ones and activities
- Confused thinking or problems concentrating

How common is mental illness?

According to the CDC, more than 50% of people in the US will be diagnosed with a mental illness at some point in their lives

Is mental illness treatable?

YES! And often, mental health treatment is very effective. Unfortunately, most people with mental illness do not receive the mental health services and support they need.

Anxiety Disorders	A group of brain disorders characterized by feelings of intense fear and worry that interferes with your day-to-day life. Anxiety disorders are the most common mental health concern in the US with more than 19% of adults and 7% of children experiencing one. Types of anxiety disorders can include Generalized Anxiety Disorder (GAD), Obsessive Compulsive Disorder, Social Anxiety Disorder, Panic Disorder, and Phobias.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • National Institute of Mental Health • American Psychiatric Association
Bipolar Disorder	A mental illness that causes big changes in a person's mood, energy levels, and ability to think clearly. People with bipolar disorder experience emotional highs (mania) and lows (depression) that are different from the emotional ups and downs most people experience.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • National Institute of Mental Health • American Psychiatric Association
Depression	A mental disorder characterized by a depressed mood (feeling sad, irritable, or empty) or a loss of interest or enjoyment in activities. Depression is different from typical sadness because it is present most of the time for at least two weeks and interferes negatively with daily life.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • National Institute of Mental Health • American Psychiatric Association
Dissociative Disorders	A group of brain disorders marked by a disconnection between thoughts, reality, identity, consciousness, and memory. Symptoms of dissociative disorders typically first show up as a response to a traumatic event. Types of dissociative disorders include Dissociative Identity Disorder, Depersonalization Disorder, and Dissociative Amnesia.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • National Alliance on Mental Illness • American Psychiatric Association
Eating Disorders	A group of disorders characterized by extreme food and weight concerns that cause emotional and physical distress and interferes with day-to-day life. Types of eating disorders include Anorexia, Bulimia, and Binge Eating Disorder.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • National Institute of Mental Health • American Psychiatric Association

Condition	Brief Description	Learn More
Obsessive Compulsive Disorder (OCD)	An anxiety disorder characterized by intrusive, unwanted, irrational thoughts (obsessions) and uncontrollable urges to do certain actions or behaviors (compulsions). For someone with OCD, the obsessions cause stress and acting on the compulsions provides temporary relief. These thoughts and impulses cause distress and interfere with daily life.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • National Institute of Mental Health • American Psychiatric Association
Posttraumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD)	A disorder developed following a traumatic event that is characterized by re-experiencing the trauma in the present through intrusive memories, flashbacks and/or nightmares, avoiding thoughts of or things related to the traumatic event, and continued fear related to the traumatic event.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • National Institute of Mental Health • American Psychiatric Association
Psychosis	A symptom of some mental illnesses that is characterized by a change to a person's thoughts and perceptions that make it difficult to determine what is real and what is not real.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • National Institute of Mental Health • National Alliance on Mental Illness
Schizophrenia	A mental disorder characterized by hallucinations (seeing, hearing, feeling, or tasting things that other people do not see, hear, feel, or taste), delusions (beliefs that are clearly false), and cognitive impairment.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • National Institute of Mental Health • American Psychiatric Association
Substance Use Disorder (SUD)	A disorder characterized by the repeated misuse of alcohol and/or drugs. SUD often occurs simultaneously in folks struggling with mental illness because people may use alcohol and/or drugs to cope with difficult symptoms associated with their mental illness.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • National Institute of Mental Health • American Psychiatric Association

Mental Health FIRST AID

from NATIONAL COUNCIL FOR MENTAL WELLBEING

Mental Health First Aid is a course that teaches you how to identify, understand, and respond to signs of mental illnesses and substance use disorders. The training gives you the skills you need to reach out and provide initial help and support to someone who may be developing a mental health or substance use problem or experiencing a crisis.
